

Camp Build

Free 'build in the wild' weekend camps for 11-15 year olds from London adventure playgrounds – along with funded places for their play workers.

Camp Build is a three-year project funded by the Mayor of London's Young London Inspired Fund. London Play will run nine 'build in the wild' weekend camps (three a year) for 11-15-year olds who like building stuff (go-karts, tree-houses, ramps etc.), or want to learn how to.

We want to give young people skills that they can use when they return to their playgrounds, to help with the upkeep and development of the site. In addition, new routes to apprenticeships, workplace training and ultimately paid work will be laid out with support given.

Each camp will provide free places for 20 young people (10 each from two London adventure playgrounds, preferably geographically close to each other). Two adventure playground workers from each playground will also be funded to attend. Along with four London Play workers, they will form a team of eight on each camp.

The location for Camp Build will be on a site close to London which is yet to be decided. All transport, meals, materials, tents, equipment and activities will be provided. There will be no cost to the young people or their adventure playgrounds at any point with Camp Build.

Next steps
